- Add: This button is used to add a record. On pressing this button all the fields are cleared and focus shifts to the first field in the logical sequence, user can now start entering values in each field. User is required to press this button each time he/she wants to add a new record. On those forms where there is no add button, user can start entering the values straight away by entering the key fields or navigating to the particular record.
- Cancel: This button is used to undo all the changes made to the current record. This button should be pressed when the user, while entering a new record or modifying an existing record, feels that he/she has committed some mistake. Please note that canceling will undo all the changes made to the current record and not just the current field.
- Delete: By pressing this button the record currently visible on the screen will be deleted from the database table. In some forms the Deletion is not actual deletion from the database table instead, only non-key values, displayed on the form, are set to null value. User gets a confirmation message after pressing delete. If he/she clicks [No] for the response, deletion is not done.
- Save: After the user has entered all the fields in an existing record or in a new record, he/she can press [Save] to save the changes to the table. At this time the record is cross-checked for any validation errors. In case of any error user has to correct all the errors before proceeding with save. Please note if user moves to any other record without saving the changes he/she has made to the current record, all the changes made to the record will be lost.
- Print: In case the user wishes to see a report of the data entered, this button may be pressed. The report will be printed on screen or the printout will come on the default printer viz. the printer for which 'Set As Default' is checked in Printers Dialog box, depending on the Print/Window option selected.

This is how the trends are transmitted

From Jan 2007, a new concept has been introduced in WebGenesys i.e. declaring Instant winner. This means when the results are authenticated by the R.O but final result sheet i.e. form A08 is awaited, the candidate can be declared as Instant winner from that constituency.

Let's say for example, the following screen depicts how an instant winner is marked

When an instant winner is selected, the above message prompts the user to confirm one more time whether the concerned candidate is declared a winner in that constituency.

Now, when OK is pressed, the following screen appears. It asks for the necessary authentication by RO/Observer. This is to confirm one more time whether a particular candidate declared as a winner has proper authentication.
